The inauguration of a new exhibition entitled “The children of ’37 in the United Kingdom” took place at the San Mamés stadium in Bilbao on 27th April, a day after the 85th anniversary of the bombing of Gernika.

Basque football giants Athletic Club de Bilbao’s new exhibition, the result of a collaboration with both Basque Children Associations ’37 (UK & Euskadi), focuses on the child refugees who fled Euskadi to the UK during the Spanish Civil War following the destruction of the towns of Durango and Gernika.

After the horrific “shock and awe” attacks on the Basque towns, petrified parents had to make the drastic, yet necessary decision to send their children away from the horrors of the war.

On 23rd May 1937, almost 4,000 children, teachers and assistants arrived in Southampton after a treacherous crossing on board the SS Habana. Following three weeks at a temporary camp, the children were gradually rehoused in groups or colonias around the UK.

Using archive photographs and documents mainly from the BCA’37 UK, the exhibition will now be open to the public for the next six months.
Asier Arrate, director of Athletic Club’s museum, opened proceedings by welcoming attendees who came from all over the Basque Country, Spain and the UK.

Those in attendance included Athletic Club’s president Aitor Elizegi, Idoia Mendia (Second Vice Lehendakari), Derek Doyle OBE (former British Consul), Begoña de Ibarra (Director General for Culture of the Provincial Council of Viscaya), Carlos Sergio (Director of Sports at the Provincial Council of Viscaya), Jose Antón Rodríguez Ranz (Basque Government Vice-Minister for Human Rights, Memory and Cooperation) and Carmen Kilner (Secretary of the BCA’37 UK and President of BCA’37 UK-Euskadi).

Athletic Club’s president Aitor Elizegi spoke about the tragic circumstances of 85 years ago that lead to a rushed evacuation of so many children. He talked of how they hoped it would be for a short time of two or three months and how, for some, this became for their whole lives. He spoke of his pride that Athletic had played a part in maintaining the children’s spirits and hoped that they would continue to inspire youngsters.

“The only thing you can do when you first hear this story is listen and open your eyes wide, because after a few seconds you realise you are hearing about something special,” said the charismatic president.
Carmen, whose mother was one of the teachers on board the SS Habana, thanked Athletic Club for their collaboration and support in putting on the exhibition. She also spoke of the parallels with the current crisis in Ukraine.

“The sound of the impact of the foot on the ball is an international language, whether with boots and a full crowd in a stadium, or barefoot in the streets or in a park.”

She continued: “The Basque boys played, they won - not only matches but also the hearts of their hosts and delighted them with their skills; friendships were made that lasted a lifetime; they became local heroes, and some became professionals. Football was, and still is, a way for refugees from all over the world to find acceptance, pride and dignity.”

Football played a huge part in the children’s lives, giving them an outlet to express themselves and to help them momentarily forget about their experiences and the horrors of war in their homeland.

Some of the children went on to play professional football, notably Sabino Barinaga, who scored the first ever goal at Real Madrid’s Santiago Bernabeu stadium, Raimundo Lezama, who won eight trophies with Athletic Club, Emilio Aldekoa, and Enrique Garatea. (See Athletic Club website for their stories here: Enrique Garatea, Emilio Aldekoa and Raimundo Lezama).

Manu Lezama, the son of legendary Athletic Club goalkeeper Raimundo, spoke emotionally about his father at the inauguration.

He said: I’d like to thank Carmen (of the BCA’37 UK) for all she has done and is doing to remember los niños de la guerra. This year is the centenary of my father’s birth and this event fills me with pride. After living through terrible events, my father learnt to be a good goalkeeper and was forever grateful to the English people for all they had done.”

Also in attendance were the daughters and younger half-brother of Enrique Garatea, one of the children who stayed in Wales. Enrique was the talented goalkeeper of Basque Boys AFC of Caerleon and went on to play professionally in Spain.

Garatea’s daughters were shown images of their father from his time in Wales, as well as a description of his personality from the archives. Cyril Cule, in his unpublished biographical manuscript ‘The Spanish Civil War: A Personal Viewpoint’ (1975), describes Garatea as a “sturdily built boy of 11; big for his age, bright eyed and vivacious.”

However, he also talks about the young boy’s nervousness due to the ordeals that he had gone through and that he “seldom has news of his parents” who have been “torn apart by the war and are somewhere in Northern Spain.”

Thankfully, Enrique later discovered that his family were alive and well and returned to the Basque Country after the war in May 1939.

Poignantly, one of the niñas, Amaia Rentería Aurrekoetxea, attended the exhibition at the museum in the San Mamés. She was in a colony in Newcastle-upon-Tyne with her elder sister Jule, who was a maestra, and younger brother Gotzon, who tragically died there. Amaia will be 100 later this year.

Following the inauguration, Carmen Kilner, Christopher Evans and Tom Wardle from the BCA’37 UK were interviewed by Dan Parry of Athletic Club about the event. The film can be seen here on Athletic Club’s twitter account.

Conclusion

The event in Bilbao was a fantastic occasion and well attended. It received a tremendous response and coverage in both the Basque Country and the UK.

The exhibition was the first of its kind at the San Mamés museum and was innovative with the archive material. It has generated much interest and ensured that many visitors will pass through its doors to see history of such importance.
Following the inauguration, a meal took place overlooking the San Mamés pitch to thank and celebrate the work of both the BCA’37 associations.
